The Brown Mackie College-Findlay chapter of the Alpha Beta Kappa National Honor Society honored its recent members at an induction ceremony held at the Findlay Inn and Conference Center on Wednesday, May 19, 2010.

Alpha Beta Kappa honors those students who excel in the areas of scholastics and leadership, showing commitment to themselves through academic endeavor and campus service as well as interaction with the community through volunteer and service projects.

The most recent inductees are (from l to r), Snowkie Kho, Abigail Ladd, Melanie Hauenstein, Darlene Dessausure, and Dorraine Gibson.

In addition to new student members, the honor society has the opportunity to award honorary membership to faculty, staff, or community members who show a dedication to student success and leadership development. The Findlay chapter was pleased to be able to award membership to Chastity Miller, Paralegal/Criminal Justice Dept. Chair. Chastity has been instrumental in providing learning and leadership opportunities for students through field trips, legal seminars, and community service.

Congratulations to all of the new members of the Alpha Beta Kappa National Honor Society.
At the last Criminal Justice/Paralegal Club meeting, Darlene Hummel, a local bail bondsman was the guest speaker. She provided the club members with information on the background and education it takes to complete the license requirements for this line of work. She also provided the details of her day-to-day activities for this job, as well as what happens when someone jumps bail. The students were very interested and excited about the speaker. There were several new faces at the meeting.

The guest speaker for the next meeting will be announced before the meeting.

On Saturday, June 26, 2010, there will be a Carrying a Concealed Weapon training at Carey Conservation. Please see Chastity Miller for more information.

The June meetings are June 3 and June 15 at 12:30 and 5:30 in Room 179, the Crime Lab.

Don’t do these in your job hunt

1. Arriving too early for an interview. By all means, arriving early is better than arriving late. However, from an interviewer’s perspective, arriving 45 minutes early and letting the receptionist know you’ve arrived is just as bothersome as showing up 45 minutes late. Checking in 10-15 minutes early is acceptable and shows the employer you are punctual.

2. Letting your desperation show. When you’re preparing for the interview, think like an employer. Do you want to hire the person with amazing qualifications, a great personality and the potential to grow with the company? Or do you want to hire the person whose primary concern is getting a paycheck, who sounds angry and who might quit the moment a better job comes along? Enthusiasm impresses an employer; desperation does not.

3. Being too aggressive with your follow up. Enthusiasm wins over desperation every time. You need to send a thank-you note. Pestersing employers doesn’t just make you look desperate, it also annoys them. They don’t have time for distractions and eventually they will think when they see your name that you were the one who would not leave you alone.

4. Talking trash about anyone. Rather than belittle the competition, promote this company. Say, “I know your competitor is doing this, and they’ve had some success, but you have the ability to do this and that to beat them.” The focus remains on this company and also on your ideas.

5. Lacking direction. Figure out what your path is so you can show an employer you know where you’re going. You don’t need to promise that you’ll stay at that position forever, but you can suggest that you are eager to learn and want to move forward. Employers like ambition because these workers tend to care about their jobs and ultimately improve the business in some capacity.
