The Criminal Justice class CJ1550—Criminal Investigation and Police Procedure was investigating a mock murder on campus on August 26. Instructor Casey Cerreta was the victim actor. The students had three suspects and one witness to interview as part of the investigation. They also had to collect evidence from the scene and compile a police report based on the evidence collected as to who they think committed the murder.

Study Tips
Finding time can be hard. We all have 24 hours and 7 days for our schedules. Why do some people get more done than others?
Organization is the key.
• For a week, keep track of how you spend your time—be honest.
• Prioritize your time. What is most important to you? What activity will gain you the most in the long run?
• Make a schedule of time for family, work and studying. Stick to that schedule.

Non-verbal INTERVIEW mistakes

According to a new CareerBuilder survey, your body language can hurt your chances of landing a job ... especially a lack of eye contact. In the survey of more than 2,500 hiring managers, 67 percent said that failure to make eye contact would make them less likely to hire a job candidate. Other non-verbals that hiring managers cited as negative included these seven things:

- Lack of smile – 38 percent
- Fidgeting too much – 33 percent
- Bad posture – 33 percent
- Handshake that is too weak – 26 percent
- Crossing arms over their chest – 21 percent
- Playing with their hair or touching their face – 21 percent
- Using too many hand gestures – 9 percent

"In a highly competitive job market, job seekers need to set themselves apart in the interview stage," said Rosemary Haefner, Vice President of Human Resources for CareerBuilder. "All that pressure, though, may have some job seekers making body language mistakes that don't convey a confident message. To avoid these faux pas, and ensure you’re remembered for the right reasons, try practicing ahead of time in front of a mirror or family and friends."

Haefner offers the following tips to avoid body language mistakes during an interview:

- Keep calm. To make the best impression, avoid nervous body language
- Practice makes perfect. Rehearse ahead of time with friends or family, do your homework on the company and be prepared for common interview questions.
- See for yourself. Look in a mirror while practicing interview responses to figure out your typical physical movements and whether or not you need to change them.

Good luck. Please come to the career services office if you have any questions about interviewing!

Business Program Director Steven Thomas and Wayne Korpics, President, raised $91.00 for the BMC-

The Alpha Beta Kappa National Honor Society Findlay campus coordinated a school supply drive for our students school-age children. Several clubs donated a large number of items.
